“ There are times when words fail to properly convey your thoughts especially when someone loses a loved one. No matter how hard you try, or how often you say it, you really don't know how they feel. I hope Monica, junior and the rest of the family put their trust in the fact that the Creator knows best and that the Creator never makes mistakes. I know it hurts and you are still searching for answers to the question “why” but no one will ever know why God chose to call him home at such a young age. The one great lesson we all learned from this tragedy is how life is short, how life is fragile and how family matters. He was a nice young man and we will all miss different things about him always very respectful but unfortunately I must say farewell young man you have made me proud but the Creator needed you more than we all do.

“ I just wanted to say to his mother and family and friends that I'm so so sorry. I lost my 17 year old son in a car accident almost 2 years ago and your son was so kind and took time out of his life to message me, a woman he didn't even really know. He recently sent me a picture of a coffee cup with my son's name on it and said he saw it in a gift shop in Myrtle Beach and thought of me. He really made my day. He also checked in to see how my newborn was doing. I say all that to say just with the couple times I've talked to him he left a lasting impression. A great person with a kind heart. God's got him. I have been thinking of all of you since I heard the news. You are not alone and I will pray that God gives you a sense of peace through it all. God Bless you all.
